1. STALIN'S TERRORIST LAWS ABOLISHED

Comment on:

The Soviet Union has revoked two special laws which provided a legal and procedural basis for the great purges of the 30's, thereby emphasizing that the regime is continuing its campaign to wipe off the books reminders of Stalin's use of police terror as an instrument of control. These laws, one dated 1934 and the other 1937, provided for "exceptional procedure in investigation and court trial" of persons accused of terrorism against the government and destruction of state property.
The decree revoking these laws said that in the future, investigation of such crimes must be guided by normal judicial standards established by law.
The 1934 law was passed on 5 December
shortly after the assassination of politburo member Sergei Kirov in Leningrad. It provided for secret trial, no appeal, and immediate execution of the sentence. It was under this law that Marshal Tukhachevsky, whose reputation was recently rehabilitated by Khrushchev, was tried and executed in 1937. It was last invoked in 1953 as the basis for trial and execution of Beria.

3. DE GAULLE'S VIEWS ON FRANCE AND ATLANTIC SOLIDARITY

General Charles de Gaulle has told an American official the belief is growing in France that the United States is becoming more and more inclined to seek bilateral solutions with the USSR on all major problems. He cited this view as the principal reason for French pessimism about European or Atlantic solidarity.

De Gaulle believes the general situation in France has deteriorated to a point where it is impossible for any government to follow a coherent policy about anything. He denied, however, that he had any "personal intention" of trying to remedy the situation.

Comment

Premier Mollet and Foreign Minister Pineau's frequent criticism of Western policy has been motivated largely by the feeling that France's views have not been given full consideration.

De Gaulle's renewed political interest may encourage independent action by French leaders who suspect that Germany and Britain may also be increasingly inclined to seek bilateral solutions with the USSR.

Interest in a strong executive is growing among parliamentary leaders of various groups, and de Gaulle will be increasingly mentioned as a likely candidate. Despite his own disclaimer of ambition, De Gaulle is now keeping in closer touch with current affairs by spending two days a week in Paris.

4. USSR TO BEGIN EGYPTIAN ATOMIC RESEARCH INSTITUTE IN 1957

Comment on:

TASS announced on 10 February that the USSR had agreed to send specialists to Egypt for consultation regarding the design and establishment of a nuclear physics laboratory, the supply of necessary equipment, and the training of Egyptian scientists in the USSR. Three Soviet atomic experts who will act as technical advisers to the Egyptian government have already arrived in Egypt.

Cairo has reportedly budgeted about $600,000 to finance atomic research and to cover the cost of sending atomic missions abroad. In this connection, several Egyptian scientists have been sent to Chicago to study at the School of Nuclear Science and Engineering at the Argonne National Laboratory.

5. PAKISTANI PRIME MINISTER INVITED TO VISIT USSR

Pakistan's Prime Minister Chaudhri
Mohammad Ali admitted to the American ambassador on 2 May that Mikoyan had asked him to visit the USSR when the Soviet first deputy premier visited Karachi in March.

Mohammad Ali said that he had told Mikoyan that he would "think it over" and had mentioned the invitation to no one except Pakistan's president and the foreign minister.

Comment Pakistan will probably not act on the invitation until the USSR reveals its stand on the Kashmir issue in the United Nations next month and until the present internal challenge to Mohammad Ali's continuance as prime minister is resolved.

Should a visit take place, Soviet-Pakistani economic relations would probably be the main topic of discussion. Moscow will also probably attempt to undermine Pakistan's role in the Baghdad pact and SEATO.

Mohammad Ali is scheduled to depart for Peiping on 14 May for a two-week visit.

6.	PATHET	LAO	VIEWS	BUDDHIST	CLERGY	AS	KEY
	TO SUBV	ERSI	ON OF	LAOS

Pathet Lao strategy in subverting Laos relies primarily on winning over the Buddhist priesthood,

On the basic assumption that "whoever is master of the pagoda is master of Laos," the first objective is to exploit the Buddhist clergy's ignorance of political matters so that "they may appear as friends of peace and fraternity" and become unwitting propaganda agents. Some methods of penetration are gifts to pagodas, repairs to buildings, and the infiltration of the priesthood by Pathet Lao sympathizers.

Comment

the long-term nature of Communist plans to subvert Laos and the intent to foster political activities in the ten "free" provinces.

The Buddhist priests in Ceylon were instrumental in bringing about the downfall of the conservative, pro-Western government of Sir John Kotelawala.

7. RECOGNITION	JAPAN MOVING TOWARD OF COMMUNIST CHINA
	"A sweeping free world movement toward recognition of the Chinese Communists," has convinced the Japanese gov- ernment it must make similar gestures
if it does not wa	ent to be isolated.
į	in support of this view proposed extensions
	e private fishing and trade agreements, prep- nt action in the field of labor, and a planned nt.

Comment The Japanese have been highly interested in French attempts to establish a permanent trade mission in China and the Japanese Foreign Ministry is studying a plan to establish a similar mission, to which the Peiping government is favorably disposed.

THE ARAB-ISRAELI SITUATION (Information as of 1700, 4 May)

	Syria, following the last-minute
discussions with Sec	retary General Hammarskjold, had initialed
a statement agreeing	g to an unconditional cease-fire, but with an addendum to the effe	ect that Syria would observe its obligations
	r including Article 25 (this refers to the car-Council decisions) and hoped that Israel would do the same.	Prime Minister Ghazzi told Moose that the addendum was not a	condition to the cease-fire agreement, but old Hammarskjold it would consider Israeli on the Banat Yacov canal a violation of the agreement.	Hammarskjold said he had no assurances fr	com Israel in regard to abiding by the Security he secretary general felt, however, that this was implicit in UN r	nembership, that Israel attached importance to his views, and he	was therefore not worried.

an Israeli patrol las	t night clashed with Jordanian infiltrators in the Gilboa region, a	bout 45 miles north of Jerusalem. The spokes-
